

The most useful aspect of this course was learning how to create a website of my own choosing, with the help of the instructor of course.

Learn how to use CSS and different programming languages.

I find my programming skills useful to me.

The least beneficial aspect of this course is that we never received enough guidance on this module.

Regarding the contribution of the learning units to my web development knowledge, they helped me a little, but most of the things I learned came from the lecturers.

The knowledge gained from the lessons has helped me a lot because I can refer to new things that I need to include in my website to make it more attractive and presentable.

I will use the skills from this course for my career because Web Development is the greatest module one can study at university as it allows you to create websites.

As for the future company I may work for, they will definitely need a website builder and that is where I will step in to help.

If I went back a semester, I would create more websites, program more, participate more, consult more.

And what I will do the same is to take advantage of every module that is provided to me in this course and get good marks, which is exactly the difference.
